How did the Fund perform last year?

The portfolio outperformed the MSCI EAFE Index (Net) in 2024 driven by strong allocation effects resulting from the integration of sustainability tools into the investment process. Overall stock selection was marginally positive. The sustainability tools driving the portfolio's sector weightings added value in the period, and the portfolio's Sustainability Lens profile contributed positively to returns. The portfolio's tilt towards securities with higher ESG scores was a tailwind as stocks with scores in the top quartiles performed well. The portfolio's energy efficiency approach was a positive contributor in the period. From a stock selection perspective, the portfolio saw the strongest results from positions in the Consumer Staples, Materials, and Industrials sectors. Security selection proved weaker in Communication Services, Consumer Discretionary, and Financials. At the sector allocation level, the portfolio saw the most value added from the underweight exposures to Energy and Materials, along with the overweight to Financials. Conversely, the overweights to Information Technology and Health Care were headwinds to performance, as was the underweight to Consumer Discretionary.
