How did the Fund perform last year?

The Fund underperformed both its FTSE Global Infrastructure Opportunities Index benchmark and global equities, as measured by MSCI ACWI Index (Net). Performance was strong heading into and following Liberation Day, supported by the portfolio's defensive positioning: roughly 30% in the Utilities sector and 13% in the Real Estate sector. These areas offered downside protection through resilient business models and attractive valuations, while the portfolio's focus on high-quality structural growth companies helped it keep pace in the subsequent rebound.

However, results lagged broader markets due to the continued strength of the AI rally. The portfolio is about 20% underweight the IT sector, and while exposure to electrification, cooling, and manufacturing tied to AI spending helped, it was not enough to offset mega-cap tech gains.

Relative to the FTSE Global Infrastructure Opportunities Index, the Industrials, Materials, and Health Care sectors were the main detractors. The Health Care sector, not included in the index, saw valuations fall on soft demand and US pricing concerns. In the Materials and Industrials sectors, underweights were amplified by no exposure to mining or Aerospace & Defense.
